

How Natural Gas Gets to Your Home or Business

The natural gas serving northern King County comes from Canada and travels through Williams' Northwest Pipeline (an interstate transmission pipeline crossing the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Wyoming, Utah and Colorado).

Puget Sound Energy connects its natural gas system to Williams' Northwest Pipeline in order to serve local customers.

Locally, PSE connects to the Williams' Northwest Pipeline system near Cottage Lake through a distribution pipeline called the Duvall lateral, which serves approximately 27,000 customers in Woodinville, Bothell, Kenmore, Kirkland and unincorporated King County.

Because of the interconnectivity of the natural gas system, all pipelines in the area must work together to ensure adequate operating pressure and reliable service to customers.
